HOW TO LOCK YOUR BIKE

A handy guide to keep this from happening to you.

LOCKING YOUR BIKE

We've all seen them – lone bicycle wheels locked to parking meters or broken bike locks hanging from fences with no bicycle in sight. Maybe you've come back to where you left your bike – and found that it was stolen! We here at MassBike never want this to happen to you.

Here's what you can do to avoid bicycle theft:

1. Always lock your bike! It takes only seconds to pedal away on an unlocked bike.
2. Use two different locks, with separate locking mechanisms. Thieves carry tools that will either snip cables, or pry-apart U-locks – but rarely both. A cable-lock and a U-lock together are very secure.
3. Each lock should have its own built-in locking device (a key-lock or combination lock, but not a padlock). Don't use a cable that's secured by a U-lock – once the thief gets through the U-lock, he's got your bike!
4. Pull your cable lock through both wheels, and lock it around a bike rack or other closed loop stand. Open-top posts (like parking meters or traffic signs) let thieves lift bikes over them. If you use a cable lock and a U-lock, you don't need to remove your front wheel to secure it.
5. Wrap your U-lock around a secure post. Then pass it around your rear wheel rim inside the bike's rear triangle. It's not necessary for the lock to secure the frame – if the U-lock locks the rim inside of the frame triangle behind your seat-tube, the bike cannot be stolen by removing the rear wheel. If you can get the frame as well, that's a bonus.
6. A small U-lock is better than a large one. Small locks are much harder to pry open with a crowbar than a wide U-lock.

This bike is locked to a rack with a cable lock and a mini-U-lock. The cable lock secures both wheels to the rack, and the U-lock locks the front wheel and frame to the rack. It cannot be stolen unless the thief can defeat both locks.

MORE THEFT DETERRENENTS

- Don't leave removable gear on your bike. Take pumps, lights, and other accessories with you.
- Park your bike where you see other bikes parked. Seek lighted areas with foot traffic.
- Write your name and telephone number on a piece of Tyvek (a sturdy cloth-like plastic available at hardware stores), and identify yourself as the bike's owner. Put this inside your rear tire between the rim and the inner tube. A bike shop will see this if they are asked to repair a flat tire!
- Ask your employer, your favorite shops, and other places you visit on your bicycle to provide safe, weather-protected bicycle parking.
